

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. There is not much more frustrating then getting unwanted phone calls from people trying to sell me things that I do not need or want. I used to get several calls in any given week. I appreciate no longer having to argue with phone salespeople, on a regular basis, about not needing anything from vacuums to time-shares.